

Dear Member,

We hope your preparations for September are going well and would like to remind you that the system requirements for remotely invigilated exams are available on the website. If you haven't been through them already, we recommend that you do so as soon as possible. You will be sent a system check email in the fortnight before your exam, but you can get ahead and set up your PC and compare your system to the specification.

The information you need is all set out in the following:

Equipment & System Requirements

Candidate Guide - Remote Invigilation

We hope you've been practising with the test papers and are feeling comfortable with the navigation of the online system. Study skills are important and your Accredited Centres work with you to help you perform to the best of your ability in the exams. Navigating comfortably and easily is a key study skill you need for online exams.

We hope you are staying well.
